Special to the State Gazette

Junior and senior students at DCHS recently attended a College and Career Fair which helped them to gain knowledge and insight on the various opportunities that await them following graduation. Dyer County High School hosted a College and Career Fair on September 11 from noon-2 p.m. for junior and senior students. There were 55 booths representing different colleges, careers, services, and military opportunities for students to visit, ask questions, and gather more information. Students were thankful for the opportunity and exposure to different options. Senior student Tyler Canada said, "It was helpful because there were [both] businesses and colleges, and I'm not sure the route I want to go yet." Students also appreciated the information in narrowing down their choices. Senior Emma Robbins said, "It was beneficial for me to be able to speak to the colleges. Since there are many options it helped me to get more information on all of them." Students also appreciated the approachability of the different representatives.

About this Senior Hannah Cox said, "It was very helpful to be able to speak and learn about different colleges. It made me feel better knowing that they actually wanted to help and inform us about things we needed to know more about." Juniors also felt the fair was beneficial. Junior Elijah Tittle said, "They were very informative and met my requirements on what I was looking for." Junior student Tryston King added, "They were very helpful in telling me what their college is about."

Dyer County High School is especially thankful to everyone represented at the College and Career Fair who made time to come and help our students prepare for their futures.
